COMMUNITY GUIDELINES

- be open and eager to learn
- understand that everyone comes with different levels/types of experience
- know that there is more than one "right" way to do things
- keep assessment student-centered
- practice data-conscious decision-making
- always question who is missing?

COMMUNITY GOALS

- define what a culture of assessment means and how we can promote this in our departments
- feel connected to each other/our work by sharing tools and best practices
- work towards an end of year presentation to showcase our acquired skills
- critically reflect on our assessment practices
- learn about diverse assessment methods, including those from other campuses
- shift away from seeing assessment as a defense mechanism
- acknowledge our results, even if they're not positive
- develop a robust resource library
- understand institutional expectations for assessment
- determine how we can inform institutional practices of data usage
- make this work accessible to our students
